

Postdoctoral Research Fellowship

Open positions at

University of Turin, Department of Law

The present document in English is to be considered as a courtesy summary of the main provisions of the notice of competition which is available in Italian at the following links:

https://www.serviziweb.unito.it/albo_ateneo/;

<http://bandi.miur.it>;

<http://ec.europa.eu/euraxess/index.cfm/general/index>.

The text in Italian is the official text of the Call for all legal intents and purposes and, in the event of non-conformity with the present document, the former takes precedence over the latter.

Duration of contract	24 months
Salary	The research fellowship amounts to 20.353,00 Euros per year, including taxes and social charges.
Benefits	The research fellow will have access to funds for participating to international conferences and seminars consistent with her/his research project.
Deadline submission applications for of	December 10 th 2018, 1 p.m. (Italian time)
How to apply	Applications should be submitted by the online procedure: https://pica.cineca.it/unito/ The candidate is requested to upload: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• the application form;• a professional CV;• a copy of its identity card;• the summary of its research project;• the certification of its bachelor degree, when earned in a foreign country;• the scientific publications she/he intends to submit for the selection (maximum 15) For any support needs by the candidate until 24 hours prior to the deadline, please contact ricerca.cle@unito.it (subject: Postdoctoral Research Fellow 2018).

FELLOWSHIPS

The candidate has the right to apply to a maximum of three of the following fellowships.

Pr. Francesco Caprioli – IUS/16

Description	The Department of Law of the University of Turin invites applications for a fellowship in: Imprisonment and rights in the era of multiculturalism. The research shall be carried out in English. The fellowship is intended to provide the successful candidate with the opportunity to pursue his/her own research while benefiting from the range of expertise at University of Turin. The successful candidate will be entitled to access the Department's Library and facilities.
Abstract	The migration flows that are changing the face of contemporary societies, also force our country to meet the challenges of multiculturalism. Among these, the need to respond to the growing demand for justice by individuals who "claim rights on the basis of what makes them different from the vast majority" (Polidoro). ^[L]_[SEP] The aim of the project is to consider the question of multicultural claims - and specifically of the jailing condition- in order to understand how the judicial protection of prisoners' rights may work in relation to foreigners who hold different expectations than those of Italian prisoners (in terms of food, religion, family, etc) and find it hard to understand the language and rules of Italian justice. In this perspective, the investigation will also have to extend to the imminent changes in prison legislation, as well as an analysis of the strategies adopted in this regard in the principal foreign jurisdictions.
Who can apply:	Prospective candidates are expected to <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • hold a bachelor's degree or its equivalent in another country; • hold a scientific-professional curriculum suitable to the development of research activities Language requirements: / Additional requirements: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Ph.D

Pr. Roberto Caranta – IUS/10

Description	The Department of Law of the University of Turin invites applications for a fellowship in: E-procurement: opportunities and critical issues. The research shall be carried out in English. The fellowship is intended to provide the successful candidate with the opportunity to pursue his/her own research while benefiting from the range of expertise at University of Turin. The successful candidate will be entitled to access the Department's Library and facilities.
Abstract	E-procurement tools have developed greatly in the past decade. In the EU the switch to full e-communication in procurement procedure is foreseen for 2018. This is only the beginning to the full electronisation of public procurement procedure that is (too optimistically?) expected to do away to a large extent with contracting authorities' discretion and ensuing

	corruption risks. The process is however facing considerable hurdles. Some decisions are not easy to be translated into algorithms. Just think of the obligation to accept equivalent technical characteristics, or to evaluate reliability in case of self-cleaning. Moreover, some basic choices, such as for instance which green or social aspects, calls back to policy decisions. The candidate is asked to map the developments of e-procurement in the EU and in other relevant jurisdictions, also from the point of view of existing international initiatives, and to critically assess its present and structural limits.
Who can apply:	Prospective candidates are expected to <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • hold a bachelor's degree or its equivalent in another country; • hold a scientific-professional curriculum suitable to the development of research activities Language requirements: English Additional requirements: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • law degree; • scientific publications: at least three in languages other than Italian; • research in a foreign country: at least one year.
Pr. Edoardo Ferrante – IUS/01
Description	The Department of Law of the University of Turin invites applications for a fellowship in: Towards a unitary regulation on sales law in Italy and in Europe. The research shall be carried out in English. The fellowship is intended to provide the successful candidate with the opportunity to pursue his/her own research while benefiting from the range of expertise at University of Turin. The successful candidate will be entitled to access the Department's Library and facilities.
Abstract	Due to the normative overlapping – a spontaneous order developed without a unitary plan – Italian provisions on sales law appear like a mix of sources in search of an identity and coordination. Civil code sales and the general provisions on contract law are sided by international sales law, European consumer sales law and the recent sectoral Proposals on distance sales and contracts for the supply of digital content. In this light, facing the inadequacy of legislative harmonisation, the purpose of the present project is to draw inspiration from the analysis of the solutions adopted by uniform and communitarian law, by soft-law and the Common European Sales Law (CESL) and re-establish the unity of the system, modernise it, not by silencing or marginalising what comes from outside the code, but promoting the dialogue and integration among all the pieces of the mosaic.
Who can apply:	Prospective candidates are expected to <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • hold a bachelor's degree or its equivalent in another country; • hold a scientific-professional curriculum suitable to the development of research activities Language requirements: English Additional requirements: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Ph. D in Private Law

Pr. Domenico Francavilla – IUS/02
Description	The Department of Law of the University of Turin invites applications for a fellowship in: The enhancement of indigenous legal heritage in India: a gender perspective on inclusion and innovation. The research shall be carried out in English. The fellowship is intended to provide the successful candidate with the opportunity to pursue his/her own research while benefiting from the range of expertise at University of Turin. The successful candidate will be entitled to access the Department's Library and facilities.
Abstract	The project, on the basis of an analysis of the relevant family law judgements, will investigate which space is given to Adivasi legal customs, examining whether and how state law is able to manage the complexity of personal laws in contemporary India. Secondly, the result will allow to shed light on the forum shopping strategies adopted by the Adivasi communities: in this analysis, a gender perspective will be adopted, with the aim of accounting for potential differences between the strategies deployed by women and those adopted by the rest of the community. The result of the research will help the production of theoretical and applicative perspectives on new and more inclusive legal paths, aimed at enhancing the Adivasi customary heritage, and on the emergence of innovative forms of organisation of the complexity of the existing legal framework. The selected candidate will substantiate her/his hypothesis with the materil collected during a period of fieldwork.
Who can apply:	Prospective candidates are expected to <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • hold a bachelor's degree or its equivalent in another country; • hold a scientific-professional curriculum suitable to the development of research activities Language requirements: English Additional requirements: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Law degree; • Ph.D
Pr. Paolo Gallo – IUS/1
Description	The Department of Law of the University of Turin invites applications for a fellowship in: Digital innovation and consumer law. The research shall be carried out in English. The fellowship is intended to provide the successful candidate with the opportunity to pursue his/her own research while benefiting from the range of expertise at University of Turin. The successful candidate will be entitled to access the Department's Library and facilities.
Abstract	Digital technology invests, with increasing intensity, in the daily practices of every citizen; consequently the need to investigate the consequences that technology has on legal rules. In particular it seems interesting to analyse the effects that digital economy has on consumer law. The problems arising in this area are many: it could be discussed, for instance, aspects like the role that digital platforms play with regard to their users, rather than the geographical discrimination of consumers in a "glocal" market, but, first of all, it seems necessary to reflect on the opportunity to maintain, with regard to online transactions, the distinction between professional and consumer. This distinction is not always easy with regard to online transactions; often the reasons that bring the contractor to act remain in the

	shadows and it is therefore impossible to determine if he/she acts as consumer or professional. The researcher involved in this project will have to deepen the themes mentioned above, trying to outline evolutionary trends of consumer law with regard to online transactions.
Who can apply:	Prospective candidates are expected to <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • hold a bachelor's degree or its equivalent in another country; • hold a scientific-professional curriculum suitable to the development of research activities Language requirements: German Additional requirements: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Ph.D • Research experiences: involvement in European research centers activities
Pr. Enrico Michele Martino Genta Ternavasio – IUS/19
Description	The Department of Law of the University of Turin invites applications for a fellowship in: Limits and innovation: the legal rights of the Jewish communities in the Kingdom of Sardinia. The research shall be carried out in English. The fellowship is intended to provide the successful candidate with the opportunity to pursue his/her own research while benefiting from the range of expertise at University of Turin. The successful candidate will be entitled to access the Department's Library and facilities.
Abstract	The research project aims to study the evolution of the legal conditions of the Jewish population in the Kingdom of Sardinia, starting from the regie Costituzioni of the 18th century up to the emancipation of 1848. The goal of the study is to explore the changes in legislation regulating the lives of Jewish communities which, during the time period analysed, experienced periods of liberalization as well as regression to stricter limits. The research will analyse the conditions of the community of Turin, Nizza e Chambery. In particular, the project will focus on two main topics. The first concerns the unique property relationship between Jewish spouses through a study of archived documents on marriage and dowry contracts. The second focuses on the transition from the Napoleonic period to the Restoration, which was characterized by the reversal of the introduction of the right for Jewish people to buy real estate properties.
Who can apply:	Prospective candidates are expected to <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • hold a bachelor's degree or its equivalent in another country; • hold a scientific-professional curriculum suitable to the development of research activities Language requirements: English Additional requirements: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Law degree
Pr. Valerio Gigliotti – IUS/19

Description	The Department of Law of the University of Turin invites applications for a fellowship in: Rethinking Prison: the civil and professional tribute of Bianca Guidetti Serra. The research shall be carried out in English. The fellowship is intended to provide the successful candidate with the opportunity to pursue his/her own research while benefiting from the range of expertise at University of Turin. The successful candidate will be entitled to access the Department's Library and facilities.
Abstract	Considering the rich number of documents found in Bianca Guidetti Serra's personal archive, it would be useful to renew the postdoc fellowship in order to focus the research on the role that Bianca Guidetti Serra played in reforming the prison system of the Twentieth Century. More precisely, the research will address three main topics: 1) the technical confrontation between lawyers, magistrates and prison staff; 2) the political, institutional and cultural debate; 3) the impact on public opinion. The research work will benefit from the analysis of archival documents, comparing and cataloguing them by the use of digital technologies; the aim is to enhance the research in an international perspective, searching, possibly, for analogies in foreign studies on similar topics.
Who can apply:	Prospective candidates are expected to <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • hold a bachelor's degree or its equivalent in another country; • hold a scientific-professional curriculum suitable to the development of research activities Language requirements: / Additional requirements: /
Pr. Michele Graziadei – IUS/02
Description	The Department of Law of the University of Turin invites applications for a fellowship in: Obstacles to the elaboration of uniform or harmonised law deriving from linguistic diversity in the development of legal terminology and technological change. The research shall be carried out in English. The fellowship is intended to provide the successful candidate with the opportunity to pursue his/her own research while benefiting from the range of expertise at University of Turin. The successful candidate will be entitled to access the Department's Library and facilities.
Abstract	The research project investigates the obstacles hindering the drafting and the application of uniform or harmonised laws, with special regard to terminological problems. The investigation shall be conducted with special regard to fields of law related to the activities of economic operators. After a survey of the state of the art, the research will deepen the relationship between technological innovation and linguistic innovation with respect to some of the principal European languages, considering in particular the challenge of producing a uniform terminology.
Who can apply:	Prospective candidates are expected to <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • hold a bachelor's degree or its equivalent in another country; • hold a scientific-professional curriculum suitable to the development of research activities Language requirements: English

	Additional requirements: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Ph.D
Pr. Enrico Grosso – IUS/08
Description	The Department of Law of the University of Turin invites applications for a fellowship in: Legitimacy of Common, Constitutional and European Judge and Civic Constitutional Culture. The research shall be carried out in English. The fellowship is intended to provide the successful candidate with the opportunity to pursue his/her own research while benefiting from the range of expertise at University of Turin. The successful candidate will be entitled to access the Department's Library and facilities.
Abstract	This research aims to explore the legitimacy of common, constitutional and european judge and the interactions with the context where civic constitutional culture grows up. There are a theoretical route and a practical one. Although this topic interacts with the other social sciences, a legal approach will be adopted. It will be studied how the problem of legitimacy has been structured by a diachronic point of view and in which fields it has been developed; how these bodies are enhancing their legitimacy by involving public opinion in their functioning processes (i.e. transparency in judges' selection processes, separate opinions); how much the use of new technologies has improved or not these processes. From this perspective, the proposals made by these Courts for promoting the implementation of the civic constitutional cultures in the weakest sociocultural brackets and in the schools will be focused on.
Who can apply:	Prospective candidates are expected to <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • hold a bachelor's degree or its equivalent in another country; • hold a scientific-professional curriculum suitable to the development of research activities Language requirements: English Additional requirements: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Ph.D with a thesis in Constitutional Law
Pr. Enrico Marelli – IUS/12
Description	The Department of Law of the University of Turin invites applications for a fellowship in: Technology and fiscal control. The research shall be carried out in English. The fellowship is intended to provide the successful candidate with the opportunity to pursue his/her own research while benefiting from the range of expertise at University of Turin. The successful candidate will be entitled to access the Department's Library and facilities.
Abstract	Tax compliance increasingly assumes technological forms: electronic support for financial statements, digital accounting, telematics tax returns, creation of databases through mandatory taxpayers' communications, and the electronic invoice from 2019. Thus, Tax Administration controls the whole tax compliance cycle in real time. In particular, the research focuses on the costs imposed on taxpayers compared with the expected emergence of tax base; on the effects of the new control instruments in terms of privacy protection; and on possible new forms of tax breaches, linked both to the new formalities compliance and to

	the potential evasion areas provided by the new instruments.
Who can apply:	Prospective candidates are expected to <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • hold a bachelor's degree or its equivalent in another country; • hold a scientific-professional curriculum suitable to the development of research activities Language requirements: English Additional requirements: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Ph.D in Law; • An appropriate number of scientific publications on tax-law, with a preference for tax control systems.
Pr. Pier Giuseppe Monateri – IUS/02
Description	The Department of Law of the University of Turin invites applications for a fellowship in: Geopolitics of comparative private law. The theological-juridical genealogy of modern categories within different nomic spaces. The research shall be carried out in English. The fellowship is intended to provide the successful candidate with the opportunity to pursue his/her own research while benefiting from the range of expertise at University of Turin. The successful candidate will be entitled to access the Department's Library and facilities.
Abstract	The aim of the research project is to develop a critical understanding of the relations between the concepts of private law and the other Human Science. The main issue is to problematize objectives and methods of comparative law with the aim to discover its strategic and subversive potentialities. Through an innovative comparative method based on the 'archaeological investigation' of concepts, the goal of the research project is to achieve a deeper comprehension of the relation between the epistemic fields of Law and Theology through a genealogical study of the concepts of 'covenant' and of 'vestimentum' respectively in their relationship with the writ of 'assumpsit on the case' and with the remedy of 'denunciatio evangelica' as fundamental moments in which the Law expresses his function of governing the life of human being.
Who can apply:	Prospective candidates are expected to <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • hold a bachelor's degree or its equivalent in another country; • hold a scientific-professional curriculum suitable to the development of research activities Language requirements: English Additional requirements: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Law degree with a dissertation in Private or Comparative Law; • Ph.D.
Dr. Stefano Montaldo – IUS/14
Description	The Department of Law of the University of Turin invites applications for a fellowship in: The extraterritorial application of EU data protection law.

	The research shall be carried out in English. The fellowship is intended to provide the successful candidate with the opportunity to pursue his/her own research while benefiting from the range of expertise at University of Turin. The successful candidate will be entitled to access the Department's Library and facilities.
Abstract	The adoption of measures with extraterritorial reach has become an increasingly frequent phenomenon in EU law. In the field of data protection, both the application of EU law to data processing operations carried out in third countries and the expectation that data controllers having an establishment in the Union comply on a global scale unveil the tension existing between the transnational character of the web and its unilateral regulation. Against this background, the project shall analyse the legal tools that have been employed with a view to achieving – or to limiting – the extraterritorial reach of EU data protection law. In particular, it shall consider the impact of the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the EU and the possible relevance of limits to extraterritoriality flowing from principles of public international law.
Who can apply:	Prospective candidates are expected to <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • hold a bachelor's degree or its equivalent in another country; • hold a scientific-professional curriculum suitable to the development of research activities Language requirements: English Additional requirements: /
Pr. Paolo Montalenti – IUS/4
Description	The Department of Law of the University of Turin invites applications for a fellowship in: Corporate Governance and Internal Monitoring Systems between Corporate Law and Special Regulations. The research shall be carried out in English. The fellowship is intended to provide the successful candidate with the opportunity to pursue his/her own research while benefiting from the range of expertise at University of Turin. The successful candidate will be entitled to access the Department's Library and facilities.
Abstract	The internal corporate monitoring systems of risk represent – both at national and European level – an essential pillar of Corporate Governance. The research shall verify - in the framework of the Corporate Governance rules and with reference to the innovation aspects offered by special regulation, self-regulatory measures and corporate governance codes - to what extent it is possible to build a "common model of monitoring systems" and to what extent distinctive features remain in certain special sectors (listed companies, banking companies, insurance companies, state-owned companies). The research has also to verify if and to what extent the technical innovation – from blockchain to computerized information flows and “internal reporting systems” – can lead to redeveloping the typical functions and operational aspects of the internal corporate monitoring systems.
Who can apply:	Prospective candidates are expected to <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • hold a bachelor's degree or its equivalent in another country; • hold a scientific-professional curriculum suitable to the development of research activities

	Language requirements: English Additional requirements: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Ph.D in Business Law disciplines; • research experiences in a foreign country; • scientific publications in Commercial and Business law as well as publications with a specific focus on a topic related to this fellowship.
Pr. Alberto Oddenino – IUS/13
Description	The Department of Law of the University of Turin invites applications for a fellowship in: Algorithmic decision making and protection of individual rights in international and eu dimension. The research shall be carried out in English. The fellowship is intended to provide the successful candidate with the opportunity to pursue his/her own research while benefiting from the range of expertise at University of Turin. The successful candidate will be entitled to access the Department's Library and facilities.
Abstract	The research shall investigate the nature of algorithmic decision making processes, in order to assess the impact on individual rights and the compatibility with relevant international and EU norms. A particular focus will be the issue of an effective remedy (especially in the form of right to an explanation of algorithmic decision). A further focus will be the perspective of developing an effective pertinent case-law both in EU and international dimension.
Who can apply:	Prospective candidates are expected to <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • hold a bachelor's degree or its equivalent in another country; • hold a scientific-professional curriculum suitable to the development of research activities Language requirements: English Additional requirements: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • law degree; • Ph.D or equivalent (with a preference for a Ph.D in International Law or European Law); • Research experience on a topic related to this fellowship;
Pr. Cristina Poncibò – IUS/02
Description	The Department of Law of the University of Turin invites applications for a fellowship in: New perspectives on gratuitousness in the context of social and technological evolution. The research shall be carried out in English. The fellowship is intended to provide the successful candidate with the opportunity to pursue his/her own research while benefiting from the range of expertise at University of Turin. The successful candidate will be entitled to access the Department's Library and facilities.
Abstract	The principle of gratuitousness has been subject to different interpretations, which reflect the opening of private law to non-patrimonial issues. "New gratuitousnesses", as opposed to

	“old gratuitousnesses”, have emerged in the context of ethical relationships. The project aims at exploring the different meanings of gratuitousness, which will be examined with special regard to innovative contexts in order to verify to what extent it can be used to understand the complexity of new phenomena. On the one hand, the business model to offer services for free, asking for consent to the processing of data, casts doubt on the real gratuitousness of such transactions and involves the issue of the commercialization of personal data. On the other, the notion of gratuitousness can also be useful to examine the new emerging ways of sharing goods and services, labelled under the sharing economy paradigm, in order to better understand the nature of such relationships and identify appropriate rules.
Who can apply:	Prospective candidates are expected to <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • hold a bachelor’s degree or its equivalent in another country; • hold a scientific-professional curriculum suitable to the development of research activities Language requirements: English Additional requirements: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Ph.D in Private Law
Pr. Alberto Ronco – IUS/15
Description	The Department of Law of the University of Turin invites applications for a fellowship in: The crisis of oral proof and evidence in the civil trial. The research shall be carried out in English. The fellowship is intended to provide the successful candidate with the opportunity to pursue his/her own research while benefiting from the range of expertise at University of Turin. The successful candidate will be entitled to access the Department’s Library and facilities.
Abstract	The crisis of oral proof and evidence in the civil trial. The research aims to explain the progressive distance between the judge on the one hand and the subjects who are bringer of probative knowledge on the other. The spread of computer instruments, which allows written communications among absentees (email, sms, and so on), and the diffusion of telematic lawsuit are the main reasons for this increased distancing. However, there are other causes, tied to the research of civil trials’ reasonable length and perhaps to a general mistrust in the loquens’ listening and in his real use as a proof. In opposite trend the minor’s listening in the family trial is increasingly used. This survey aims to analyse the Italian rules about the oral proof in the civil trial and also to compare them with the criminal and administrative trial’s ones, and, last but not least, with the international ones too.
Who can apply:	Prospective candidates are expected to <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • hold a bachelor’s degree or its equivalent in another country; • hold a scientific-professional curriculum suitable to the development of research activities Language requirements: French Additional requirements: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • graduate thesis in Civil Procedure;

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Ph.D • Scientific publication on the topic of this fellowship (proof and evidence in civil trial): at least one.
Pr. Claudio Sarzotti – IUS/20
Description	The Department of Law of the University of Turin invites applications for a fellowship in: Experiential teaching as an instrument of innovation in the training of the jurist and in the empowerment of vulnerable people: a socio-juridical analysis. The research shall be carried out in English. The fellowship is intended to provide the successful candidate with the opportunity to pursue his/her own research while benefiting from the range of expertise at University of Turin. The successful candidate will be entitled to access the Department's Library and facilities.
Abstract	Starting from the critique of the formalism operated by legal realism with regard to the training of the jurist and from the complexities of the context in which he operates, the project consists of an empirical social-juridical research aimed at analyzing the innovative impact of clinical legal education on the training of the jurist, through the analysis of case studies. After an analysis of the literature on the application of experiential pedagogy on the teaching of law, the research analyzes: a) the impact on law students of clinical experience, with a focus on its effectiveness in training the reflective practitioner b) the impact of clinical experience on legal and social workers involved in clinical programs, with a focus on the innovative elements that such experience introduces into their practices. c) The effectiveness and replicability of the practical intervention of clinics on the accessibility to the right of vulnerable people (migrants, homeless people, inmates, children).
Who can apply:	Prospective candidates are expected to <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • hold a bachelor's degree or its equivalent in another country; • hold a scientific-professional curriculum suitable to the development of research activities Language requirements: English Additional requirements: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Ph.D in Socio-legal studies; • Experience in legal clinics as well as national and international conferences.